

CONNECTED THROUGH NATURE

As we bury ourselves in technology, we often forget to truly appreciate the beauty of nature. In these pictures we see the natural beauty and creation as well as the man-made buildings in the background. When you're in a big city surrounded by huge buildings and chaos, and though that itself as a beautiful aesthetic, you get distracted from the real beauty of green/colorful scenery. When walking down both Boston Common and Central Park, we're able to really admire the life within the parks. You're able to see the leaves grow, flowers bloom and smell the fresh air, giving you a sense of comfort and an escape from the chaos. Though both are located in different cities with different buildings, their roots sprout in the same ground across the world. They're connected in a way where distance doesn't matter; they're connected through nature.

Boston Common

Central Park

Kitty Xia