

Beauty: Do Not Be Restricted In What We See

These two pictures shows obviously fountains with sculpture. However, the difference is there background. The first picture taken in Boston is donated, and created by a French man. The sculptures that are decorated in the fountain indicates the Neptune and other water spirits. However, the second picture do not have a historical background because it is in a studio city. How do they related to each other? The answer is the BEAUTY.

We see in the pictures, are the decorations of a city. Regarding what beauty is, I think that beauty is an overactive existence. It is first seen in nature and real life. The design of sculptures and fountains are the expression of art, the artistic beauty. Moreover, art is from our real life. For example, the Neptune is from the myths, which is a kind of art that created by human. Not only how exquisite the fountains are beautiful, but also the ideology of the background.

What's different? The beauty of the second picture is embodied from its convenience. Not showing in the picture, but are built in real life, the chairs surround the fountain gives the tourists places to take a rest. The purpose of building the fountain is not only for the beauty that we can see, but also the beauty of convenience. Both of the pictures represents the beauty, on surface or its purpose.